OVERVIEW

Coworth Park is a secret hideaway amongst rolling fields, where a grand Mansion House and converted stables offer rural charm garnished with modern delight. Here dining options include Michelin-starred modern British cuisine, award-winning afternoon tea and relaxed, rustic dining with views across the grounds.

240 acres offer a thousand ways to explore. The setting is a breath of fresh air for outdoor adventures or luxury downtime, with an award-winning spa offering a welcome dose of relaxation.

HISTORY

Dating from 1776 Coworth Park was originally owned by land owner and prosperous East India merchant, William Shephard. Throughout the generations the estate has passed through the hands of a long list of lords and ladies, including the Earl of Derby who owned the estate for the early half of the 19th century.

Coworth Park first became associated with polo in the mid 1980s when the owner of Selfridges and Fortnum and Mason, Galen Weston, purchased the estate and built its first polo ground and stables. In March 2001, a further polo ground and practice field had been added, and the estate was set up as a luxurious residential estate with polo facilities.

In 2008 work began to restore the main Georgian manor house to create a luxury country house hotel estate and spa. Coworth Park officially joined Dorchester Collection as the eighth hotel in September 2010.

DÉCOR

The vision for Coworth Park was to create the finest country house hotel and spa in the UK with design and décor that recognised Coworth Park's origins and yet avoided the predictable country house clichés. Residential specialist interior designers, Fox Linton Associates, were the creative minds behind this vision.

The design is one of incredible comfort and simple beauty, creating a relaxed and informal environment that encourages intimacy and privacy. Furnishings, furniture and art are mostly British-made, acknowledging a British tradition of craftsmanship. Throughout the hotel, the flooring is of English smoked oak adorned with beautiful bespoke rugs. Soft pigments and dusky colours instil a character that is undeniably English – subtle, understated and elegant.

GROUNDS

The first sight of Coworth Park's 240-acre grounds is one that stays with you long after you leave. Overseen by head of gardens Terri Crow and her team, the hotel gardens offer a tranquil area of respite for enjoying the English countryside. A beautiful wildflower meadow, sunken garden and Lime Grove offer freedom to roam, romp and rollick with country pursuits including horse-riding, croquet and even polo, on professional polo grounds.

ROOMS AND SUITES

49 rooms and 22 suites, including two signature suites

The hotel has 49 guest rooms in the main Mansion House and peppered across the estate. Warm, contemporary décor reflects the serenity of the rural setting, alongside sumptuous four-poster beds, open fireplaces and the signature freestanding copper baths.

Set apart from the Mansion House, the stables and cottages are accessed by a short ride in a golf buggy – an experience in itself. This intimate enclave of converted stables creates a village-like atmosphere just behind The Barn. Many feature fireplaces, duplex layouts and private patios. The copper roll-top bath is a particular delight. The jewel in the crown is The Dower House, an historic Grade II listed house dating back to 1755, sensitively transformed into a three-bedroom private residence with state-of-the-art country kitchen. A tranquil garden and lake set the scene for this country idyll, shared only with Coworth Park's family of graceful swans.

The newest addition to the collection is another signature suite – North Lodge. This Grade II listed cottage on the outskirts of the grounds offers sublime seclusion, complete with a private garden for summer BBQs or cosy winter nights around the fire pit. Inside there are three bedrooms, a kitchen with dining area and country-style living room with fireplace.

DINING AND ENTERTAINMENT

For a more relaxed dining experience, muddy boots are most welcome at The Barn, which offers a delicious brasserie-style menu of comfort food in an informal setting. Housed in the original barn frame, with rustic features such as a working stone fireplace, the design makes it perfect for all seasons. In winter it becomes the height of cosiness with the roaring fire, and in summer the sunny outdoor terrace is the place to be.

Drawing Room

A cosy, elegant room, graced by glorious views of the grounds. This is the place for enjoying an award-winning afternoon tea, light meals and drinks, or simply to linger happily with coffee and a newspaper. In the warmer months, al fresco dining makes the perfect summer's treat.
